MEET the STONEMASONS: HANDS BEHIND the HERITAGE

Pascal Mychalysin
Master Mason

Pascal has devoted over 30 years of his life to Gloucester Cathedral. For the past 13, he has led the team as Master Mason, a position recognised by the Worshipful Company of Masons, guiding both restoration work and the development of future stonemasons.

His legacy includes:

- Mentoring over 40 apprentices, many of whom now work across the UK heritage sector
- Spearheading the Cathedrals' Workshop Fellowship (CWF) at Gloucester, a national training programme for stonemasonry skills
- Overseeing major restoration campaigns including Project Pilgrim Phase 1, using a blend of traditional techniques and modern conservation insight.

Paul Synan
Senior Stonemason

Paul brings a unique academic and practical approach to stonemasonry. With a Master's in Ancient History and a Foundation Degree in Heritage Skills, Paul combines a deep appreciation for historical context with hands-on expertise.

Highlights of Paul's work include:

- Conservation of the 15th-century Lady Chapel
- Carving new gargoyles for the Cathedral's exterior
- Mentoring three current apprentices
- Serving as a Journeyman Mason of The Worshipful Company of Masons

James Bayliss
Senior Stonemason

James's path into stonemasonry began in landscaping and construction, but his passion for heritage craftsmanship brought him to Gloucester Cathedral in 2012. Originally a one-year placement, James's appointment became permanent due to his exceptional skill and commitment.

Highlights of James' work include:

- North Ambulatory restoration, involving stone conservation, guttering work, and installing six new gargoyles
- Conservation of ancient memorials and monuments
- Playing a central role in the upcoming Cloister Project
- Serving as Module Leader for key CWF degree units

The CLOISTER PROJECT: A once-in-a-Century OPPORTUNITY

The Cloister Project is set to be the stonemasons' next major undertaking, a testament to their continuous commitment to preserving Gloucester Cathedral.

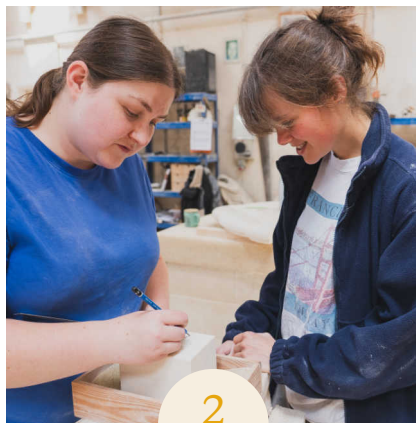

Built in the 14th century, the Great Cloister is more than just an architectural marvel; it's regarded as the first and finest example of fan vaulting in the world. It's also a cultural icon, featured prominently in the Harry Potter films. For our local community, this space is invaluable, serving as the backdrop for our education and outreach programmes and providing a unique and inspiring setting for learning and engagement throughout Gloucester.

Today, it faces serious structural risks, with decades of wear and poor historic repairs, and so we begin a bold, ten-year conservation effort. This vital undertaking directly relies on the expertise and dedication of our stonemasons, ensuring this iconic piece of heritage endures for generations to come.

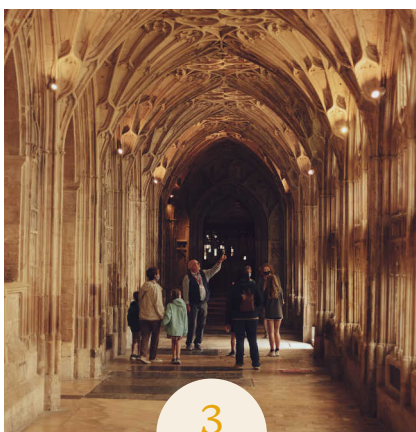

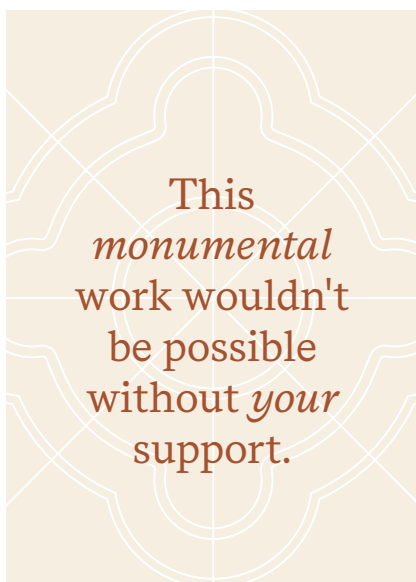

Repair the Cloister's fragile stonework using historically accurate methods

Train a new generation of stonemasons through live, hands-on apprenticeships

Create public engagement opportunities through guided tours, open workshops, and family-friendly activities

TRAINING tomorrow's MASTER MASONS

Heritage skills only survive when passed on. That's why mentoring is central to everything we do.

Each year, Gloucester Cathedral trains and mentors apprentices through its Cathedrals' Workshop Fellowship programme—supported by The Benefact Group. Apprentices work side-by-side with expert masons while completing a Foundation Degree in Heritage Skills.

With every stone laid, they build not just the Cathedral's future—but their own.

The WORKSHOP of ST PETER: WHERE CRAFT LIVES ON

Our stonemasons work from the Workshop of St Peter, off Pitt Street, Gloucester, one of just 13 Cathedral workshops in England. This historic yard is where centuries-old techniques are kept alive every day.

The team uses:

- Traditional tools like chisels, mallets, and tracing compasses
- Specialist limestones from France—Lavoux for carving and Beaunotte for weathering
- State-of-the-art equipment for modern conservation challenges

It is here that heritage is shaped—one block at a time.
