Awards and Activities

Hussein Kassim (PPL) Awarded ESRC Senior Fellowship

Professor Hussein Kassim has been awarded one of nine Senior Fellowships given by the Economic and Social Research Council following a competitive call launched in February 2019. The fellows, whose role is to provide evidence and analysis on issues and policy areas affected by Brexit, will work closely with the UK in a Changing Europe (UKICE) programme.

W.G. Sebald Exhibitions and Publication – Nick Warr (AMA)

Two complementary exhibitions at Norwich Castle Museum and the Sainsbury Centre for Visual Arts celebrate the work of the renowned UEA author W.G. Sebald (1944-2001). Co-curated by Dr Nick Warr, Curator of Photographic Collections, Art History, both exhibitions share a focus on Sebald's photography to explore the origins and influence of his work. Both exhibitions have an extensive and varied programme including talks, workshops, artist events, and film shows.

Art and Cinema in 21st Century Peru: Aesthetics, Politics and Platforms

This three-day international conference hosted an array of international researchers, artists, activists and curators in London, 19-21 June 2019. It was opened by the Peruvian Ambassador to the UK, Juan Carlos Gamarra and supported by the Peruvian Embassy, as well as UEA, ILAS (London) and PUCP (Peru). It was organised by Sarah Barrow (Prof Film and Media/PVC Arts and Humanities, UEA) and Dr Giuliana Borea, (ILAS/PUCP and graduate of UEA).

Special Issue Published on Electoral Integrity and Management (PPL)

A special issue of the journal International Political Science Review has been published on electoral integrity and electoral management, co-edited by Toby James (PPL) and PhD student Leontine Loeber. The introduction to this special issue sets out a new international research agenda on running elections. It includes research based on the largest ever survey of electoral authorities from around the world.

Leverhulme Fellowship Success for Tiffany Atkinson (LDC)

Tiffany Atkinson (LDC) has recently received a Leverhulme Fellowship for 'O What Can I Say: Embarrassment, Ethics and Poetry'. The project brings together her long experience of writing, reading, teaching, performing, and reviewing poetry together with her critical interest in 'difficult' modes of communication. The project turns towards a 'problem' in the reception of poetry, which is usually characterised as the most subjective and emotional form of literary expression, but also as the most wilfully enigmatic and difficult.

First Nation Artist in Residence at UEA

For the past month, a large office on the third floor of Arts 2 has been transformed into an active art studio for First Nation multi-media artist, Sonny Assu, of the Kwakwaka'wakw Nations in Canada. Sonny is hosted at the University by Beyond the Spectacle: Native North American Presence in Britain, an AHRC funded research project, co-led by Jackie Fear-Segal (AMA), working to discover and explore the stories of Indigenous travellers to Britain, in both the historical record and current moment.

ESRC Grant Success for Jamie Hakim (AMA)

FTM lecturer in media studies, Dr. Jamie Hakim was recently awarded an ESRC New Investigator Grant for his project 'Digital Intimacies: how gay and bisexual men use their smartphones to negotiate their cultures of intimacy'. He is the Principle Investigator with Dr Ingrid Young (Edinburgh) as co-Investigator.

WS Graham Exhibition by David Nowell Smith (LDC)

'Constructing Spaces' (19 Oct 2018 - 31 March 2019) was an interactive, immersive installation curated by David Nowell Smith (LDC) at the National Poetry Library, to mark the centenary of the poet WS Graham. Based on archival materials, documentary evidence, and interviews with Graham's friends, he collaborated with the exhibition design agency Art & Assembly and the sound artist Jamie Perera, in order recreate Graham's creative spaces, and invite people to play with and build on Graham's own compositional practices.

New Area Studies Colloquium: On Theory and Method – Blurring Genres

On Wednesday 10th and Thursday 11th July UEA held its second New Area Studies Colloquium bringing together those interested in theory and methods from across the university. The initiative, hosted by the Faculty of Arts and Humanities, was organised by Susan Hodgett (AMA/PPL) and showcased a wealth of knowledge on regions of the world along with interest in both inter and multidisciplinary research.

New Research Ethics Subcommittee for the Faculty

With effect from 1 October 2019, the Faculty of Arts and Humanities will have its own Research Ethics Subcommittee (HUM S-REC). Currently ethics applications from HUM are submitted to the General Research Ethics Committee (G-REC) which also reviews applications from other Schools within the University. Thomas Otte (HIS) will be Chair of HUM S-REC.

A Walking Map of Tudor and Stuart Civic Entertainments

Matthew Woodcock (LDC) has recently produced and launched a free walking map that identifies the various different sites at which drama, entertainment, music, and sports were performed and enjoyed in sixteenth- and seventeenth-century Norwich. The map is based on research assembled as part of his AHRC-funded project 'Accessing the Records of Early English Drama in Norwich, 1540-1642'.

Symposium by Paul Frith (AMA) and Keith Johnston (AMA)

The 'Colour and British Visual Culture' symposium will be taking place on Friday 6th September in Cinema City, Norwich, and is being organised by Paul Frith and Keith Johnston. Arising out of the AHRC-funded 'Eastmancolor Revolution and British Cinema, 1955-85' project, the symposium will consider how the British film industry's push towards colour parallels the introduction of colour in other media and creative sectors.

Delia Dumitrescu Presents at EPSA Annual Conference

In June 2019, Delia Dumitrescu presented a paper 'Reporting on Trump: Do Trump tweets embedded in news articles influence public opinion?' co-authored with Andrew R N Ross.

Rupert Read (PPL) updates on his work on the Precautionary Principle

Rupert Read updates on his work, which focuses on applying the Precautionary Principle to areas of modern day life. A large focus of his recent work has been applying this philosophic argument to the climate change debate, which has also involved presenting and gaining public impact through his role as 'thought-leader' in Extinction Rebellion's Political Strategy group.
