Complaint handling process

We hope that you won't need to contact us to make a complaint but understand that sometimes things don't go quite right and you might need some extra help to solve an issue.

We'll do our best to resolve your complaint as soon as you get in touch with us. Most complaints can be resolved quickly and easily by contacting one of our Customer Service advisors who will do all they can to resolve your complaint but will escalate your call to a manager if needed. If you're happy that our advisor or manager has done everything to resolve your issue, we will close your complaint.

If your complaint is about a financial product, such as your Refresh Device Plan, our Customer Service advisors and Managers are highly skilled in delivering the support you need, and will write to you following your conversation to confirm the outcome.

If you've spoken with a manager and your complaint is still not resolved, we'll pass this to our dedicated team of Resolution Specialists. Our specialist complaints team will carry out an impartial review of your complaint and aim to reply within five working days, but if the issue is complex and we think our investigation will take longer, we'll keep you updated with our progress.

We'll always try to call you to make sure we've understood your issues, unless stated otherwise, and we'll also email you after the call to confirm what we've discussed. We promise that we'll always treat you fairly and with respect, update you with any progress, and clearly explain what has happened and aim to resolve your complaint on the call.

Alternatively, you can contact us directly by email or post. Make sure you include your contact details and what you'd like us to do to resolve your issue. We'll send you an acknowledgement and pass your details to our Resolution Specialists or team of Customer Service Experts, depending on the help you need.

If we're unable to speak with you about your complaint, we'll write to you with the outcome of our investigation and what we're going to do to put things right. We'll keep your complaint open for 28 days, so if you think there's something we've missed, you can contact us again. If we don't hear from you within the 28 days, we'll consider your issue resolved and will close your complaint.

What happens next?

If you're not happy after we've responded to your complaint, or if your complaint isn't resolved after eight weeks, you may wish to refer your complaint to an Alternative Dispute Resolution (ADR) service.

The ADR is a free service, which will independently review your complaint. They investigate complaints fairly by listening to both sides of the story and looking at the facts. Their decision is binding on O2, but not on you as a customer. O2 work with two ADR service providers, depending on what your complaint is about. When you speak with our complaints team, we'll make sure that if you remain unhappy you're provided with a final position letter, which will detail what we've done and advise you which ADR you should contact.

CISAS – Communications & Internet Services Adjudication Scheme

CISAS is an Alternative Dispute Resolution scheme, approved by Ofcom. CISAS will review your complaint if it hasn't been resolved after six weeks, or if you can provide a final position letter, which we'll send you if we're unable to resolve your complaint. You have up to 12 months to contact the Ombudsman after receiving this letter.

You can contact the CISAS on:

Financial Ombudsman Services

If your complaint is about your consumer Refresh Device Plan or Business Essentials agreement, you will need to contact the Financial Ombudsman Service. The Financial Ombudsman Service is an independent Alternative Dispute Resolution scheme who'll review your complaint if it hasn't been resolved after eight weeks, or if you can provide a 'Final Position' letter. You have up to 6 months to contact the Financial Ombudsman Service after receiving this letter.
