Infuse Travel

Infuse Travel is an Australian, B Corp Certified student travel organisation that specialises in meaningful Aboriginal cultural immersions and On Country learning experiences for school groups.

Our immersions are built on long-term, trusted relationships with Traditional Owners and Aboriginal communities, ensuring learning is guided directly by community voices, not by pre-scripted content or external interpretation. This approach prioritises authenticity, cultural safety and respectful, two-way learning that benefits both students and the communities we work alongside.

Infuse NT Immersions give students the opportunity to gain a deeper understanding of Aboriginal people, history and culture through extended time On Country, learning directly from Elders and Traditional Owners.

With decades of experience operating across the Northern Territory and remote regions, Infuse provides access to communities and cultural experiences that are rarely available to the broader public.

These opportunities are made possible through long-standing partnerships built on trust, reciprocity and ongoing collaboration with Aboriginal community leaders.

The team works closely with Traditional Owners, university lecturers and education specialists to ensure every immersion is culturally safe, educationally rigorous and grounded in local authority. Our NT school programs include:

- Central Australia Cultural Immersion
- Top End Immersion
- Epic Outback – Darwin & East Kimberley Immersion

Infuse programs are designed to go beyond surface-level exposure, focusing instead on deep engagement, reflection and genuine cross-cultural understanding. Students are immersed in daily life On Country, participating in activities such as storytelling, cultural practices, language learning and community-led experiences that cannot be replicated in a classroom or standard tour setting.

Strong governance, culturally informed staff training and rigorous risk management underpin every program, ensuring both safety and respect are maintained without compromising authenticity or depth of experience.

Beyond our Aboriginal cultural immersion programs, Infuse also delivers the following programs in Australia and around the world:

Overland Oz Educational Safaris

Overland Oz Educational Safaris operates in the Top End of the Northern Territory creating educational programs for schools touring in Kakadu, Litchfield and Arnhem Land. The sheer rugged beauty of the Top End, one of the most beautiful places on Earth, needs to be seen to be understood.

With over 22 years' experience, Overland Oz delivers learning outcomes that help to bridge the gap between non-Aboriginal and Aboriginal communities. Locally owned and operated, Overland Oz is immensely proud to offer school groups the opportunity to engage in a truly life changing experience.

Tours can be tailor-made to the specifications of your students' curriculum requirements. Travelling with Overland Oz gives the benefits of a small group experience. Larger groups are divided into smaller vehicles to tackle the particular activities throughout the day, and re-join in the evenings as one group to talk about the outcomes and learnings. This allows students more time to learn from their guide and provides the opportunity to immerse themselves deeper in the local culture. This approach reduces the impact on an area at one time, protects the environment, assists with safer group management, enhances the learning experience and increases the possibility of wildlife viewing. The learning outcomes are brilliant and the beautiful places visited don't get ruined for others!

Another major part of Overland Oz's endeavours is to provide community service projects for students to get involved with on Aboriginal lands. Many schools choose to fundraise to help with the projects. Local jobs are created for community members on their own land, which is extremely important for local Aboriginal people. This type of touring experience is not for everyone, however for those that are willing to commit and give back in a meaningful way - it becomes a life changing challenge.

Red Earth

Red Earth's mission is to connect people with Indigenous Australia in a safe and meaningful way, and to provide economic opportunity, sustainability, and empowerment to those who live there.

"Talk is cheap, come and do something on the land".

-Rich Bowen, Traditional Owner of Guurill.

We provide Traditional Owners the tools and platform needed to welcome people on their land and tell their own stories on their own terms. Since 2011, we have connected over 7,500 people on Country through meaningful multi-day cultural immersions.

When we say immersion, we mean immersion: school groups will spend the majority of the time on private Homelands immersing themselves in culture on Country with Traditional Owners and their families.

Activities include:

- Visiting sacred sites
- Dreamtime stories around the fire
- Service project work
- Fishing alongside Traditional Owners
- Didgeridoo and tool making
- Painting and pandanus weaving workshops
- Learning about Traditional bush medicine and bush tucker
- Exploring rock art sites.

Whatever the activity, the goal is always to facilitate personal connections and allow students to develop a first-hand understanding of the challenges and beauty of modern life in remote Indigenous communities.

"I have been an educator for over 30 years... having just returned from a Red Earth immersion, I have never witnessed the powerful personal growth in students to which I saw... Living and learning on Country with our First Nations Australians was a privilege and life-changing for all."

Ms Melissa Etherton, Director of Innovation and Enterprise at Loreto Toorak, Victoria.

In addition to smaller opt-in immersions, we are experts in all-grade immersions. Our All-Grade program allows every student in a year level to make a safe and meaningful connection with Traditional Owners on homelands. Whether there are 50 or 300 students in a grade, they are split into small, classroom-sized groups for the majority of the program to ensure they are able to get the most out of the experience, all at the same time.

From our comprehensive risk assessment to our qualified leaders and round-the-clock operations bases around Australia, we are well equipped to make every immersion safe.

Remote Education Tours

"An experience hard to replicate"
Student, Cranbrook School, NSW.

Remote Education Tours (RET) is a leader in Northern Territory education tourism, specialising in cultural immersion tours. Focusing on bridging the gap between past and present cultures, RET has pioneered the delivery of immersive cultural experiences that have enriched the lives of thousands of students from all over Australia.

For 30 years RET founder, Reg Ramsden, has nurtured RET in parallel with his philanthropic venture 'The Watarrka Foundation' and has developed an experience that encapsulates many of the school's curriculum components. Trips can be tailored to link student needs with specific learning outcomes whilst also developing other life skills that extend beyond the classroom such as mindfulness, wellbeing, curiosity, social skills and cultural sensitivity.

RET offers 5, 8 and 10 day programs that are led by experienced, qualified tour guides and utilise purpose built campsites that are comfortable and safe, whilst still allowing for an authentic adventurous outback experience. Tour activities take students back through time following ancient trail footsteps to learn the story of Aboriginal ancestry and country, the history of Alice Springs and early European explorers, and the unique flora and fauna of the region.

Providing further context are other guide led activities such as commentary hikes through World Heritage National Park gorges, canyons and mountain ranges, connecting with local characters, and participating in their customs such as smoking into Country, just to name a few.

For groups travelling through the area on their own itineraries RET, in collaboration with local Traditional Owners, can provide a separate 4-hour cultural discovery tour at the Lilla Community educational campsite, about 10km from Kings Canyon.

RET programs are a profoundly important resource for young developing minds and an equally useful tool for teachers wanting to acquire the skills and confidence to teach the ever-emerging importance of Australia's history and Aboriginal culture.

Standley Chasm

Learning Adventures

The quintessential outback town of Alice Springs, located in the heart of Australia, offers an excellent variety of educational adventures that fulfil a range of curriculum requirements. A school excursion to the Red Centre has justifiably become a rite of passage for many Australian students.

Central Australia is a true semi-arid desert ecosystem. A climate of clear sunny days, cold winter nights and little rain make for interesting endemic flora and fauna, where arid region biology and environmental science is showcased. Participate in a nature based session at Alice Springs Desert Park or visit Earth Sanctuary and Desert Knowledge Australia to learn how land, climate and sustainability interacts through real examples and hands-on experiences with innovative technologies.

History is on display around every corner. Discover the ancient past through the exciting Megafauna Central display of fascinating extinct species collected at the nearby Alcoota fossil site. Or, learn from Arrernte Aboriginal people at Hermannsburg and Standley Chasm Angkerle Atwatye.

Alice Springs showcases an extensive modern history of settlement at many dedicated attractions. Students learn of the adventures and achievements of early explorers and pioneers to the remote interior. The Alice Springs Telegraph Station Historical Reserve, Women's Museum of Australia, Alice Springs School of the Air and the Royal Flying Doctors Tourist Facility all bring stories of the past to life. The region's significant historical events and cultural influences have contributed significantly to modern Australia and provide valuable learning experiences for students of all ages.

An excursion to the Alice Springs region immerses students in the landscape. They'll find history resonating through everyday life and develop a deeper understanding of how the environment influences lifestyles, communities and culture.

Take the opportunity for authentic interaction with the area's Aboriginal people and foster appropriate, ethical and sensitive cultural awareness in your students. Marvel at their learning journey as they discover the fascinating inter-connectedness between plants, animals, people and land.

This unique outback metropolis rewards visitors with incredible natural assets, is imbued with history, culture and Aboriginal art and surprises with quirky festivals and world-class major events.

Alice Springs Desert Park

Alice Springs Desert Park is your essential introduction to Australia's central desert environment, effortlessly blending the plants, animals and people in one purpose built facility. Students will experience the spirit of a living culture, explore a vibrant botanic wonderland and get up close with outback animals and characters that epitomise the fun and adventurous spirit of the Red Centre.

The 1300 hectare attraction reflects and interprets the Australian desert in a memorable and highly informative way that is both biologically and culturally sensitive.

Knowledgeable, passionate and enthusiastic guides make sure this magical experience will not be forgotten.

An education program can be as simple as a self-guided exploration including daily interactive guide presentations, taking in a free flying bird show 'Nature Theatre', cultural presentations and the opportunity to see endangered animals in the Nocturnal House. Alternatively, book a discovery session with specialised educational and immersive experiences linked to curriculum allowing students to connect with the geology and history of Central Australia, threatened species and Aboriginal culture.

The Park is nestled at the base of the spectacular West MacDonnell Ranges, a 10 minute drive from the centre of town. Park guides are first aid trained and have current Working with Children checks. Alice Springs Telegraph Station

Nestled among River Red Gums 4kms from the town centre along the banks of the dry Todd River, the Alice Springs Telegraph Station (ASTS) was the first building constructed by European settlers in Central Australia, in 1871. The following year, Morse Code messages were humming along Australia's Overland Telegraph Line.

Student groups explore a wealth of Australian history and learn of the importance of Morse Code and telegraphy as the genesis of modern telecommunication, cutting international communication from months by boat to hours by telegram. This sits astride exploration history, including John McDouall Stuart's team who mapped the remote interior from Adelaide to Darwin.

Discover the intersectional history of the region, where the early settlers interacted with Arrernte people, and the factors that contributed to the tragedy of their displacement. In the 1930's the Old Telegraph Station became the 'Bungalow', home to mixed race children of the Stolen Generation.

During WWII the site became the supply yard for the Alice Springs military base, which is another story preserved by the current open-air museum.

Desert Knowledge Australia

Desert Knowledge Australia (DKA) is located 8km south of Alice Springs. It was designed as a culturally safe place where travellers from the south, east and west would stop and light a fire to send a signal to request a meeting with Arrernte people, living on the northern side of Heavitree Gap (Ntaripe). Elders or other group members from Alice Springs (Mparntwe) would meet the travellers and share stories, songs or ceremony.

The edu-tourism program at DKA provides an opportunity for students to learn from the oldest knowledge systems on earth while gaining an understanding of renewable energy and space research. Programs are delivered by DKA's partners Centre for Appropriate Technology (CfAT) and Batchelor Institute of Indigenous Tertiary Education and are aligned with the Australian school curriculum.

The DKA Solar Centre, a partnership between DKA and Ekistica (an Aboriginal owned engineering company), is one of the largest multi-technology solar demonstration facilities in the southern hemisphere providing valuable open access data to over 10,000 users across the world every year. Students explore the importance of solar and renewable energy in our lives by engaging with an engineer, along with on-site demonstration of various solar technology. Hermannsburg Historic Precinct

Established in 1877, the mission was the initial point of contact between Western Arrernte and European cultures. The mission provided a sanctuary and source of medical assistance for Arrernte people during the contact period. For many years it was the largest settlement in Central Australia.

The mission was staffed by Pastor Carl Strehlow under whom most of the extant buildings were built (1897 - 1910). Using a variety of German inspired techniques, the buildings were constructed utilising mainly local materials.

Hermannsburg is associated with a number of noteworthy people in Northern Territory history. Carl Strehlow and his son, T.G.H. Strehlow, created detailed recordings of the Arrernte language and culture. Hermannsburg was also the home of Albert Namatjira, one of Australia's most famous landscape artists.

Wander around the old Lutheran Mission and get a glimpse of life as it was for the early pioneers and their families.

Learn about how the European settlers and local Arrernte people built a thriving community, despite many difficulties and setbacks. An introductory talk and mini guided tour are available by prior arrangement. Catering can also be arranged by the Kata Anga Tea Rooms.

Megafauna Central

Located in the centre of Alice Springs, Megafauna Central showcases the unique megafauna of Central Australia from the Miocene Epoch, about 8 million years ago. The exciting story of megafauna in Central Australia is presented through displays of the fascinating fossils found at the Alcoota Scientific Reserve, alongside exquisite illustrations and life-size megafauna replicas, Arrernte audio interpretations, and a range of immersive activities that invite students to unearth fossils and interact with Paleontologists in the lab.

Alcoota is an exceptionally rich and scientifically significant fossil site, located about 150km north east of Alice Springs (this site is not open to the public). It preserves the abundant bones of 30 species of animal, including many megafauna that were living in the heart of Australia in the late Miocene Epoch, at a time when the Australian deserts were just beginning to form. The fossils at Alcoota are spread over a 200m stretch of ground and include the remains of as many as 3000 individual animals that all came to be buried in the same place. Included among these was the world's largest bird, a fearsome crocodile that would more than match the biggest modern-day salties, marsupial 'lions', marsupial 'wolves' and herds of giant browsing wombat relatives. What brought all these creatures to one spot and killed them? What can we learn from them about the evolution of Australia's unique fauna? Come to Megafauna Central to uncover the mystery. Tailored school tours can be arranged and charges may apply. Bookings are essential.

Uluṟu-Kata Tjuṯa National Park

Uluṟu and Watarrka region

Uluṟu-Kata Tjuṯa National Park

Learning Adventures

Uluṟu-Kata Tjuṯa National Park is internationally recognised as a World Heritage-listed area for both outstanding natural and cultural values. The park is on Aboriginal land and jointly managed by the Australian Government and Aṉangu Traditional Owners. Aṉangu welcome all visitors to the park and invite them to learn about the living cultural landscape including Tjukurpa (Aṉangu lore – the foundation of Aṉangu life), Pitjantjatjara and Yankunytjatjara (local languages), inma (traditional ceremony, songs and dances), traditional tools, weaponry, bush tucker and more. Stay in the nearby town of Yulara while you explore Uluṟu (Ayers Rock) and Kata Tjuṯa (The Olgas).

There are many rewarding ways to enhance your visit to Uluṟu - explore the Cultural Centre, book a dot painting workshop or a cultural tour, ride a camel or explore the base walk on foot, by bike or on a tour. Students can engage with national park rangers through presentations, guided walks and activities that cover relatable subject areas such as history, culture and nature. They'll learn about the fascinating geology, flora and fauna pertinent to the area. Make time to marvel at the phenomenal domes of Kata Tjuṯa at Walpa Gorge or on the Valley of the Winds walk. Applications can be submitted for exemptions on park pass entry fees for school groups.

A short drive up the road, nestled in the shadow of the magnificent Mt Connor is Curtin Springs Station, providing convenient accommodation, educational station tours and rest-stop facilities. Continue to the northwest to discover Watarrka National Park, home to the awe-inspiring Kings Canyon. Explore the stunning creek walk or tackle the spectacular rim walk. Be amazed by the ancient geological formations, solidified water ripples in the rock (evidence of an ancient ocean) and the Garden of Eden – a true outback oasis. During summer, begin the rim walk early for a spectacular sunrise across the landscape and to avoid the heat.

The 450km road journey to Alice Springs is an extraordinary one, offering a true sense of the vastness of the region. Allow students to explore the constantly changing semi-arid micro-systems and unique geological features. Off road capability will lend to further rewards such as Rainbow Valley and the Henbury Meteorite Craters.

Located 85km from Ayers Rock Resort and 220km from Discovery Kings Canyon, Curtin Springs Station is the perfect base for exploring the region. As a diversified pastoral and tourism business, Curtin Springs offers a unique opportunity for schools and student groups to add a different perspective on the desert environment.

Get an insight into how food production can be sustained alongside land protection. The Curtin Springs Paper tours provide a focus point to discuss a range of curriculum content with student groups.

Programs can be adapted for age groups and tailored to suit interest areas covering history, land management, tourism, art, marketing, business planning or sustainability.

Karrke Aboriginal Cultural Experience & Tours

Karrke is owned and operated by Christine Breaden and Peter Abbott who live in the small Aboriginal community of Wanmarra, within Watarrka National Park, close to Kings Canyon. They created the business as a means to preserve their languages, cultural knowledge and heritage, enabling them to pass on their Aboriginal knowledge to younger generations and enrich visitors' experience of their country.

Christine and Peter pack a lot into a one hour visit. Students are introduced to native foods such as bush tomato, bush plum, wild fig, bush bananas, wild onions, native bush peach (quandong), honey ants and witchetty grubs. They learn how Aboriginal people determine if witchetty grubs are present in Acacia roots and how grinding tools help turn plants such as Rock Fuchsia and Emu Bush into bush medicine. Discover the significance of dot painting as an important medium through which Central Australian desert people tell their stories. See how Mulga wood is shaped into weapons such as spears, hunting clubs and multipurpose tools such as the No.7 boomerang.

Interactive displays give students the chance to touch and experience plants and artefacts, and ask questions about how Aboriginal people have thrived for tens of thousands of years in this extreme, harsh yet bountiful landscape.

Wintjiri Wiṟu

An immersive cultural experience, the Wintjiri Wiru story begins in the spiritual heart of Australia.

1,100 drones depict a chapter of the ancient Mala story from Kaltukatjara to Uluṟu. This is the first time an Aboriginal story has been told through the medium of lights, lasers, projection and drone technology at this scale and frequency, and performed on a regular basis anywhere in the world.

For thousands of years, the Aṉangu have made their home in the lands around Uluṟu and have passed down their stories, songs, and language through generations. We are fortunate that many Anangu are happy to share their stories and living legends with us.

We highly recommend that students also experience the Mala Walk prior to experiencing Wintjiru Wiru to deepen their knowledge of the Mala story.

A fascinating experience for students that captures a vast range of learning capabilities and cultural understanding.

Tour departs from Ayers Rock Resort

Learning Adventures

Step back in time to an ancient classroom and learn from the oldest living culture on Earth. Just a three hour drive south east of Darwin, or two hours north of Katherine, discover the wonders of Australia's largest national Park and the icon of the Top End - Kakadu National Park. The Park's World Heritage-listed natural and cultural values offer abundant learning opportunities in key learning areas, while seamlessly weaving in cross-curriculum priorities.

An array of Aboriginal cultural experiences describe how their ancient, living culture and language is intrinsically linked with the natural environment. Local knowledge, handed down and preserved for thousands of generations, is openly shared with students. Explore the mesmerising escarpment country that protects some of the best examples of Aboriginal rock art in the country and cruise the expansive, picturesque wetlands.

Park ranger guided activities and online resources provide a range of study options covering the seasons of Kakadu, varying habitats, native wildlife, impacts of feral animals, fire-burning practices and risk management of the National Park.

Arnhem Land is a 97,000 km^2 Aboriginal Reserve in the north east. The major centres are Nhulunbuy (Gove), Maningrida in the east, and Gunbalanya (Oenpelli) in the west. Groups that make the journey overland, on unsealed roads, are rewarded with a true outback adventure into a pristine and culturally rich environment. For those short on time, flights are also possible from Darwin to Nhulunbuy. Please note, entry to Arnhem Land requires permits.

Arnhem Land is well-known for its strong Aboriginal culture, natural landscapes and unique art style. Outstanding cultural immersion programs provide two-way learning experiences that create lifetime cross-cultural relationships and deep ethical understandings. The unique pedagogy of Traditional Owners highlights the inter-connectedness between country and people, the centrepiece to culture. Students develop a strong understanding of the vibrant Yolngu culture through first hand introductions into family kinships and contextually explained gender responsibilities.

In addition to the rich, living culture of the Yolngu people, explore the significant evidence suggesting early trade relationships with the Macassans and Malays. Arnhem Land also has links to World War II history, mining, Japanese pearling history and is now home to Australia's first commercial spaceport - providing a wide collection of study options for a variety of year levels. Nurture your students' learning amidst the breathtaking natural classrooms found within the Kakadu and Arnhem Land region. Bursting with wildlife, nature, culture, history and excitement, together you'll create the excursion of a lifetime.

Ayal Aboriginal Tours

Victor Cooper, owner and operator of Ayal Aboriginal Tours in Kakadu National Park, has been running these specialised tours since 2008 as a way of sharing his living culture with visitors from all over the world. Victor was one of the first Aboriginal rangers in Kakadu National Park over 25 years ago. Originally field based and looking after the country, he was later positioned in a management role at Park Headquarters.

As a Minitja man, Victor has the cultural credentials to share the stories that are attached to the historic and culturally significant rock art sites in Kakadu. Victor provides interpretation from both a traditional and a scientific perspective with respect to the geology and the land forms in the region. The rock art tells stories of how Bininj lived, hunted and gathered in the area.

Victor also provides Kakadu National Park step-on guide services, giving cultural interpretation at art sites and cultural talks and presentations. Victor engages both large and small audiences with his unique style, depth of knowledge and local experience.

On 19 February 1942, the first and largest single attack mounted by a foreign power on Australia occurred when 242 Japanese aircraft attacked Darwin. Students can investigate how the bombing impacted the city by visiting attractions that share the tales of this tragic event. There are several museums which tell a wider story of the Northern Territory and its colourful past, providing educational programs that incorporate art, culture, history and natural sciences.

Surround students in the study of Earth and environmental sciences with personalised guided tours at wildlife parks, charter a boat in Darwin harbour or cruise the wildlife-rich rivers and billabongs throughout the region.

The outer Darwin region has many enticing activities to add to your NT learning adventure. The upper Adelaide River region boasts fascinating wetland and wildlife experiences and enriching cultural tours. Further to the south, the Mary River region abounds with adventure and team building activities or students can take an educational wetland cruise. You'll also discover fascinating WWII sites in the Adelaide River township, while a nearby cattle station provides hands-on activities and outback accommodation.

The sensational Litchfield National Park is just over an hour south of Darwin. Explore the area's intriguing features with guided bushwalks that reveal the remarkable flora and fauna, showcasing the unique ecosystem. A school group campground, ranger talks and educational resources are available to support school groups. There are also outdoor education and bushcraft survival providers who add another level of interactivity with the local environment.

An excursion itinerary in the Darwin region can be tailored to suit any year level. With so many options, finding complementary experiences that address specific learning areas to achieve tangible student outcomes, is easy. Take time to experience the many learning adventures on offer and engage your students' imaginations, long after they return to the walls of their classroom.

City of Darwin Cruises

City of Darwin Cruises will give your students an eco-sailing adventure around Darwin Harbour with commentary on the harbour's history and ecosystems.

Sailing catamarans provide the best outdoor platform to enjoy and learn about the unique marine environment - the vessels are ideal for nature viewing due to their ability to sail quietly. Their wide beam allows for great stability and provides ease of movement around the vessel so everyone can view wildlife comfortably.

Staff will be constantly on the lookout for harbour wildlife to share with students, like the rare snub fin dolphin, bottlenose dolphins, dugong and sea birds. Students can also join in identifying harbour wildlife for a recording project. High importance is placed on the environment and, in particular, the marine ecosystem. Darwin Military Museum

Featuring the Defence of Darwin Experience and Darwin Holocaust Memorial and Education Centre

The Darwin Military Museum (DMM), featuring the Defence of Darwin Experience (DDE) and the Darwin Holocaust Memorial and Education Centre (DHMEC), is set within 4 hectares of sub-tropical gardens within the East Point heritage and nature reserve. The DDE tells the story of the bombing of Darwin on 19 February 1942, with an interactive audio-visual multi-media exhibit and artefacts from that fateful day. The DMM (opened 1969) presents a collection of over 3000 artefacts to tell the story of Darwin and Australia's rich military history from WWI. The Darwin Holocaust Memorial and Education Centre is a permanent exhibition dedicated to educating visitors about the Holocaust, including Australia and the Northern Territory's connection, honouring victims and survivors, and promoting awareness of the dangers of hatred and intolerance.

The centrepieces of the museum are the WWII buildings comprising the command post (CP) and gun emplacement 2 (GE2) that originally housed the 9.2" guns installed to protect Darwin from seaborne attacks. The CP and GE2 were constructed during WWII as part of Fortress Darwin. Today they display military weapons, uniforms, accoutrements, original wartime film footage, artwork and more. Outside these buildings the museum displays military vehicles, weapons and relics from WWI, WWII, the Vietnam War and modern day.

With an aim to educate students on Darwin's military history, links, resources and specifically developed activities aligned to the Australian curriculum from lower primary through to Year 10 are available online. With prior notice, free history talks on the Bombing of Darwin, and the aftermath can be arranged for groups on request. Other on-site facilities include outdoor shaded seating areas, café, toilets and off-street parking.
