CONTACTS

The BARRIÈRE group

Barrière is, above all, a family adventure — a succession of generations of passionate entrepreneurs who have written and reinvented the story of the French art of living.

1912–1962

In 1912, Eugène Cornuché, then director of the Casino in Trouville, built a second gaming temple in Deauville. And to welcome the players, a hotel: Le Normandy. In La Baule, his friend and associate François André contributed to the creation of a similar seaside resort and inaugurated the Hôtel L'Hermitage in 1926. Just like in Deauville, success was immediate. In 1927, after taking over the Société des Hôtels et Casino de Deauville (SHCD), this passionate entrepreneur launched the construction of the Hôtel du Golf in Deauville and revolutionized tourism with the innovative concept of the "French-style resort," offering casino, hotels, and sports facilities in one place.

François André

1962–1990

Lucien Barrière, François André's nephew, joined the family business in 1951 and took the helm in 1962 after his uncle's passing. Under his leadership, the group expanded, modernized, and reached new destinations such as Cannes, Trouville, Dinard, Royan, and Enghien-les-Bains. Deauville became the trendiest resort, attracting high society's elite to Lucien Barrière's venues. In 1975, he co-founded the American Film Festival in Deauville. In 1980, he created the Société Hôtelière de la Chaîne Lucien Barrière (SHCLB), bringing together his hotels and casinos.

Lucien Barrière

From 1990

In the early 1990s, Diane Barrière succeeded her father. She reinforced the legend and gave rise to the inimitable “Barrière style,” calling on renowned designers. Under her guidance, the Group acquired the prestigious Fouquet’s brasserie on the Champs-Élysées in 1998, followed by the Hôtel Fouquet’s in 2006.

Today, her children Joy Desseigne-Barrière and Alexandre Barrière continue to develop and promote the Group both in France and internationally, true to the values of their predecessors.

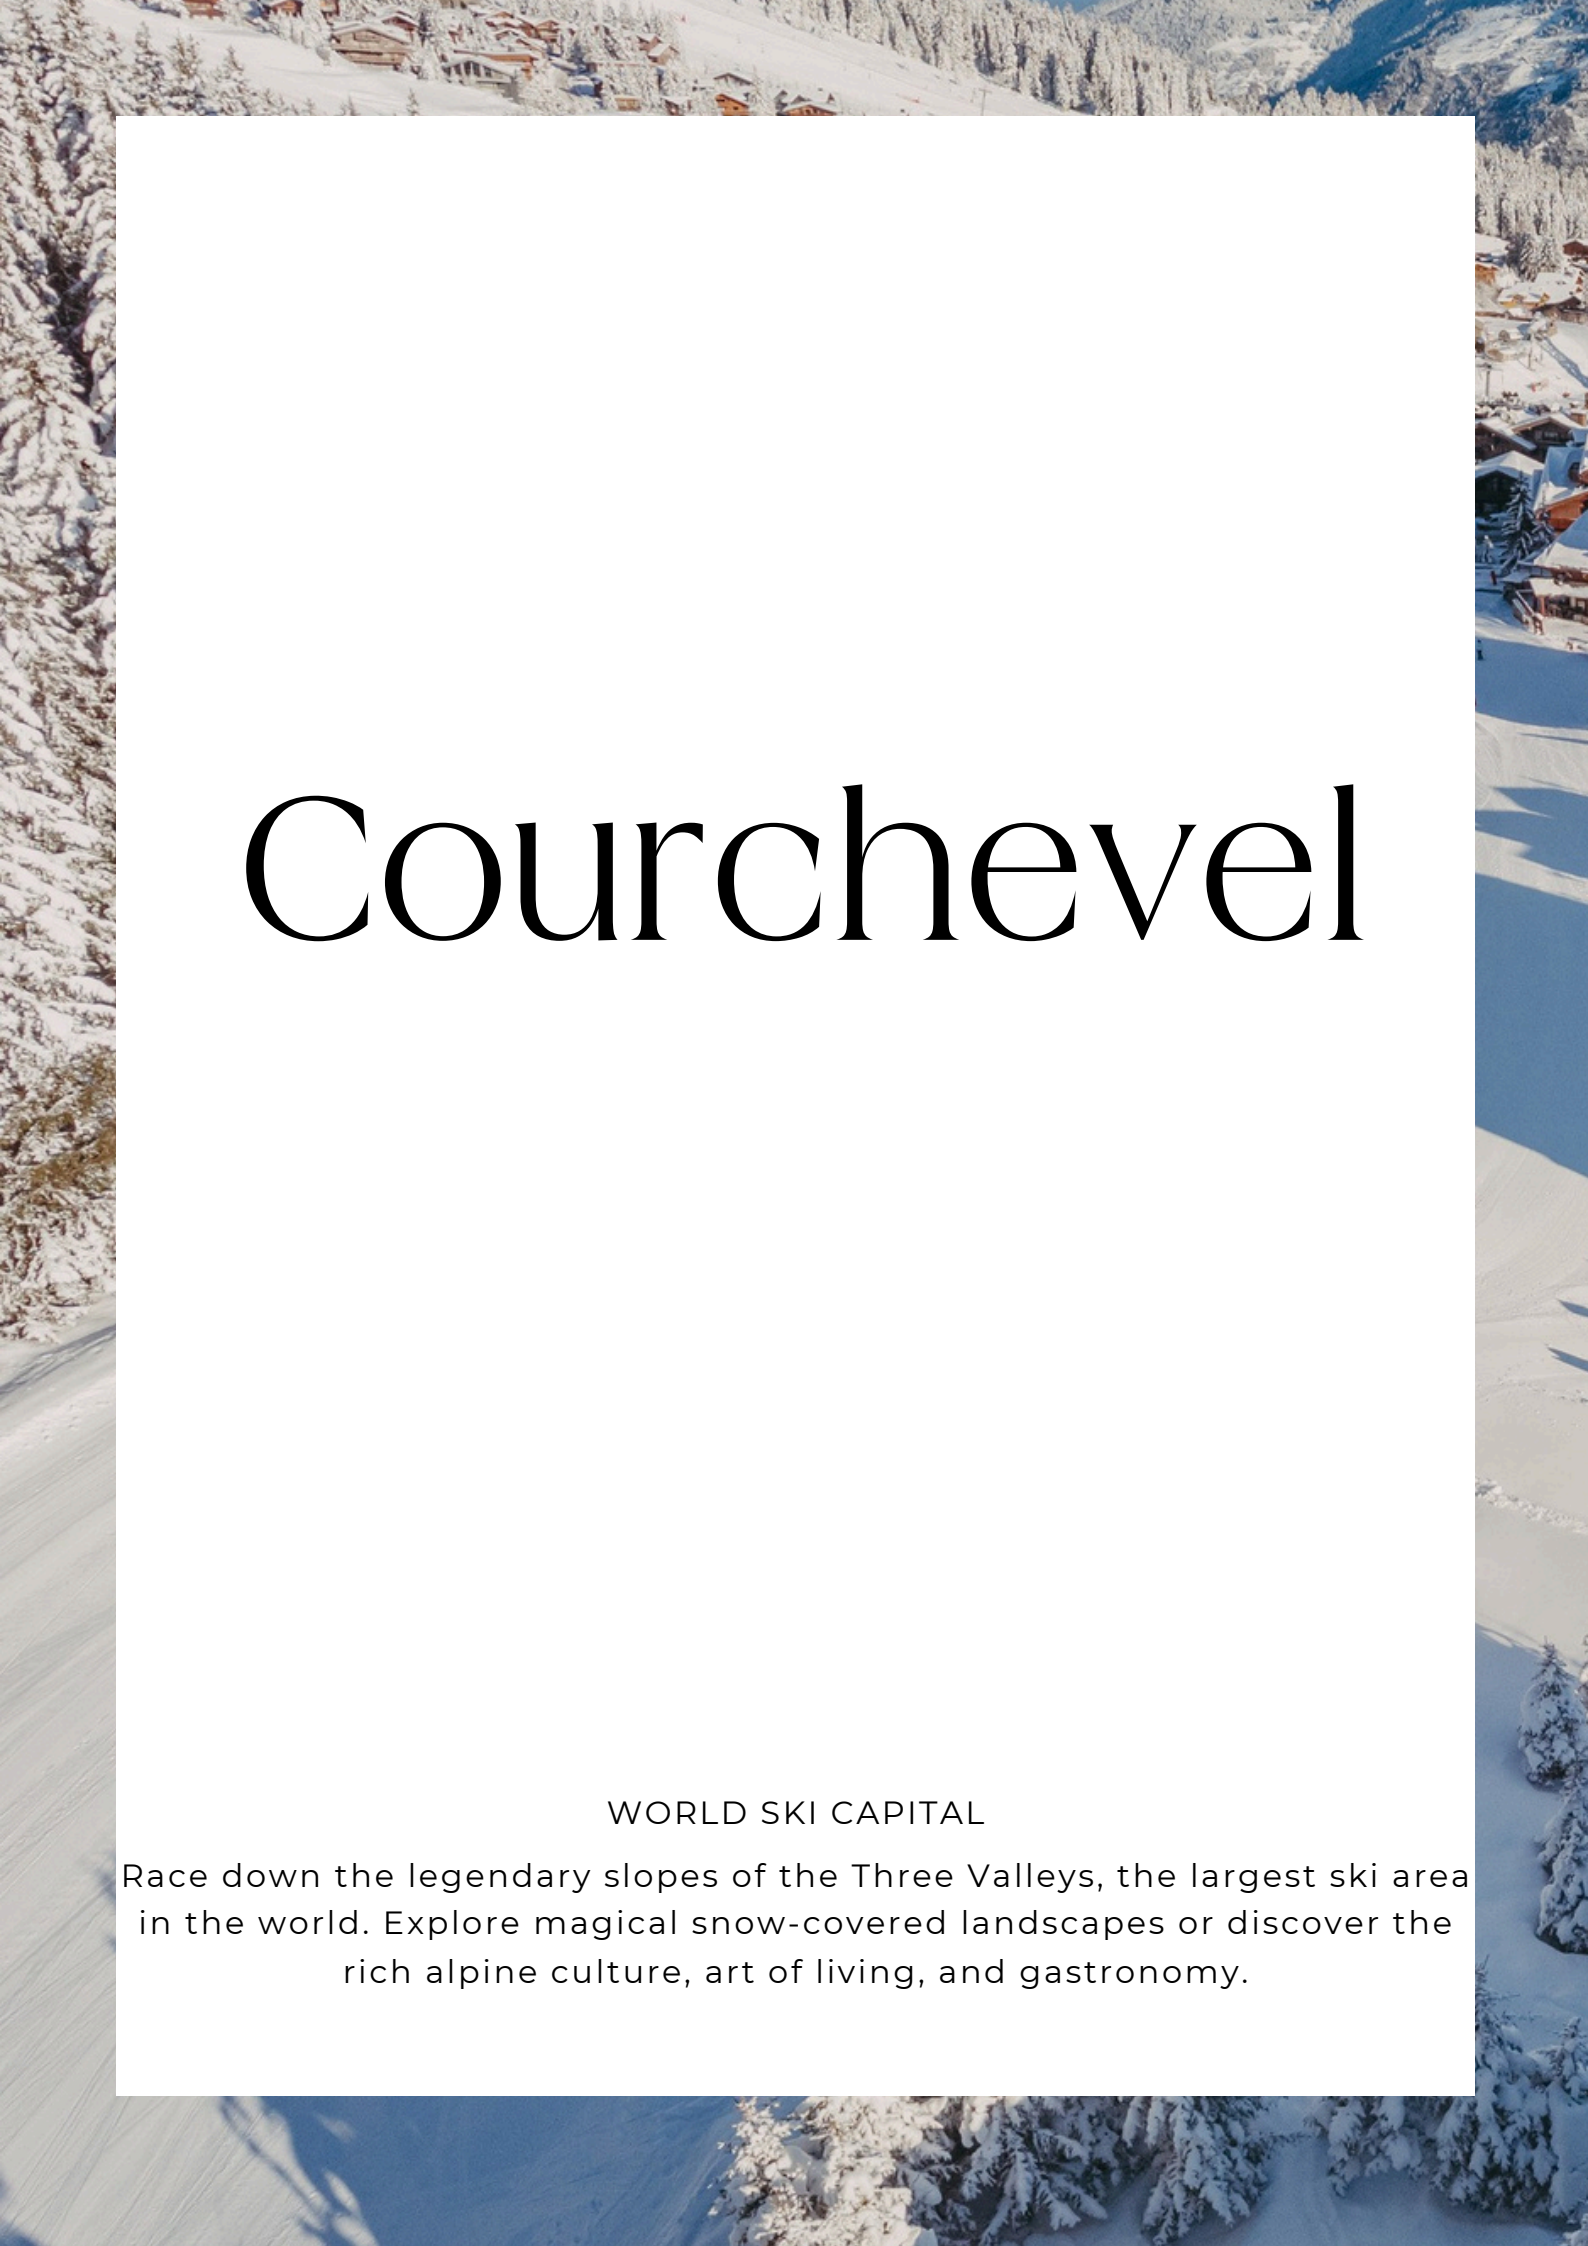

Present on four continents, Barrière now owns 20 hotels located in exceptional destinations. Hosts of legendary personalities, film backdrops, and venues for prestigious international events, these properties are filled with stories and a timeless soul that has endured for over a century, inspiring every renovation or new opening.
